INTRODUCTION.

From the manuscript record as it appears in the following pages we may infer that Deacon Samuel Bancroft was a prominent and influential citizen, a man of piety, respected and honored by members of the church and inhabitants of the town.

From such a man and his estimable wife, both of honorable ancestry, we may rightly expect that among their descendants will be found those who have attained prominence and distinction in the various walks of life.

It is interesting, therefore, to note a few examples whose names have added lustre to the pages of history; who, in part from a common ancestry, have administered justice, striven to right the wrongs of the oppressed, advanced the cause of righteousness in a higher conception of the Deity, and presented with an ability rarely equalled the growth and development of a nation.

The first child of Dea. Samuel and Lydia (Parker) Bancroft was Samuel, born July 12, 1736. He married Sarah Holt, March 30, 1758 and settled in Annapolis, Nova Scotia, where he rose to prominence and became a judge.

Mary, the fourth child of Dea. Samuel and Lydia Bancroft, was born August 2, 1732. She married Francis Lovejoy, of Amherst, N. H., January 24, 1765. In 1790, they removed to Albion, Me., where by a beautiful lake they made their home. Eight children were born to them. Daniel their first child born March 31, 1776 appears to have inherited the deep religious faith of his mother, whose prayers and counsel influenced him to devote his life to the ministry. He prepared for that service at the Academy at Byfield, where he was an inmate of the home of Rev. Elijah Parrish.

He married Elizabeth Stenson of Georgetown, Me. Their first child, Elijah Parrish, born December 9, 1802, early developed an ardent love for knowledge and entered Waterville College in September 1823.

In 1827 he went to St. Louis, where he was engaged in teaching and editing a newspaper.

He returned east and entered the Theological Seminary at Princeton, N. J., where he prepared for the ministry.

In the fall of 1833 he became editor of the "St. Louis Observer." He married, March 4, 1835, Celia Ann French. Preaching and editing the "Observer" he condemned slavery and was obliged to leave that city for Alton, Illinois, where after his press had been destroyed by mob violence and his life threatened, he secured another press which in defending he was killed, November 7, 1837, a martyr to the cause of freedom.

His brother Owen, who was with him, resolved to devote his life to the abolition of slavery, and as pastor of the Congregational Church of Princeton, Illinois, used every effort to do so. Owen Lovejoy was elected to Congress in 1856 and continued in office until his death March 25, 1864 at Brooklyn, New York.

Dea. Samuel and Lydia (Parker) Bancroft had been married twenty years when their fourth son and tenth child, Aaron, was born, March 10, 1755.

The son of a farmer, he helped his father on the farm, in the meantime preparing for college. He entered Harvard College in 1774, and although his studies were interrupted by the exciting times incident to the Revolutionary War he was graduated in 1778. He studied theology in preparation for the ministry, and received a call, (doubtless through the influence of his brother Samuel,) to preach at Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, in 1780. On his return three years later, he preached in Connecticut and his native state before settling in Worcester, Mass.

He was one of the pioneers in liberal christianity, now known as Unitarianism. In 1807 he published the "Life of George Washington," he was also the author of a number of printed sermons and various discourses.

Rev. Aaron Bancroft observed the fiftieth anniversary of his settlement over the church in Worcester by the delivery of an appropriate discourse, January 31, 1836. He died, August 19, 1840<sup>30</sup>, in his eighty-fifth year.

George, son of Aaron and Lucetta (Chandler) Bancroft, was born at Worcester, Mass. October 3, 1800. At an early age he was placed at the Academy of Dr. Abbot at Exeter, New Hampshire, where he made such progress he was able to enter Harvard College at the age of 13 years. He graduated second in his class in 1817.

The following year he visited Germany and studied under the most eminent professors. On his return to the United States in 1822 he was for some years engaged in teaching and writing.

He entered the political arena and held some minor offices before he was chosen Secretary of the Navy by President Polk, in 1845. While holding that office he founded the United States Naval Academy. From 1846 to 1849 Mr. Bancroft was Minister to England. In 1867 he was appointed Minister to the Court of Berlin, and from 1871 to 1874 he was Minister Plenipotentiary to the German Empire.

While George Bancroft received many honors at home and abroad, it is not as a statesman or diplomatist that he is most widely known; his "History of the United States," is the result of a half-century of laborious research, and his fame as a historian will outlive all other achievements.

Seldom has a man received greater homage than was paid to this illustrious American at his funeral in Washington, D. C., January 20, 1891, which was attended by the President, Vice President, Members of the Cabinet, Foreign Ministers, representatives of the Senate and House, military and naval officials, civilians and others. Among the many floral offerings, a large wreath of white roses and heliotrope, rested on the coffin, the gift of an Emperor.

The descendants of the Reading farmer who have been thus honored are by no means all who are worthy of our homage, others having the same ancestor have in some degree contributed to the industrial, intellectual and moral welfare of the nation; and, although their names may not be found upon the pages of history, they also, are entitled to our respect and honor.

The manuscript record of the family of Deacon Samuel Bancroft, his journal and diary, preserved by one of his honored descendants, through whose courtesy it came into my possession, is herewith printed for the use and benefit of all who have an interest in the past.

FOREWORD

During the summer of 1757, Fort William Henry, near Lake George, was besieged by the French and Indians under Gen. Montcalm. The country was alarmed and Massachusetts sent thousands of its militia to their assistance, some went as far as Albany before the news of the surrender of the Fort and subsequent massacre by the Indians reached them.

Gen. Pepperell wrote from Springfield, August 13, that the people were so ready "to go to the assistance of the distressed, that this part of the province seems almost evacuated, the whole militia within 40 miles being drawn off."

Dea. Bancroft's journal follows:

Monday August 15: 1757 this evening about nine o'clock I Recived 2 Warrents from Coll Tyng to Capt Swain & Capt Goodwins Requiring ym to Send one quarter of their Company under their Command to Springfield under ye Cair & Command of their Lieut or Ensyn to General Peppril; I went with these Warrants to ye Capt, & Delivred ym we called ye Commands Together at Eight a clock Tuesday morning when twelve men agreed to go with me Namely Isaac Smith Ephriam Parker Phinihas Parker Phinihas Lovejoy Benjamin Nichols Joseph Bancroft Jonathan Wilson Jacob Townsend John Atwell Nathaniel Cowdry Isaac Noyce Joseph Felch these men I Dismissed till Wednesday morning at Seven a clock to meet me at wobourn
